The Vélo Voie Verte is an 11-km green cycle path along the banks of the canal all the way to Montech marina with plenty to see on the way. One interesting feature is the various 19th-century lock cottages, vestiges from the past given a new lease of life by passionate people like Gabriel whose canalside restaurant in Lacourt-Saint-Pierre makes a perfect pit stop.

5 / ENJOY A COFFEE ON PLACE NATIONALE

Classed as one of the most beautiful public squares in France, Place Nationale, with its tiles and double row of arcades, is the place to relax with a glass of wine or coffee and watch the world ao by.

10 / HIT THE SHOPS IN MONTAUBAN TOWN CENTRE

One big open-air shopping mall, Montauban town centre is packed with independent stores that we have no qualms in calling retail gems. Fashion, toys, food and drink, soap or old-style hardware stores... you will be pleasantly surprised by the diversity on offer.

* Georges Lautner's 1963 film Les Tontons Flingueurs ("Crooks in Clover" in English) featuring the infamous "idiot from Montauban" played by Lino Ventura has become a cult classic among the locals. Fernand Naudin's famous line "One should never leave Montauban" will never go out of fashion! The brasserie "Lulu la Nantaise" takes its name from one of the cult characters in the movie despite him only having two lines in the entire film. A recommendation for food and drink whether you've seen the film or not.

Classified as an "art and history" town and one of the capitals of the Occitanie region, Montauban has inherited a rich architectural and cultural legacy from a past going back almost a thousand years. You'll soon understand why when you walk around the town. Potter around the streets to visit the many private villas, Place Nationale, the Ingres Bourdelles Museum and the Saint-Jacques church and cathedral. Don't forget to wander up and down the newly regenerated Allée de l'Empereur and Allée Mortarieu and cross the Tarn River over the Pont

1 / PONT VIEUX (early 14th century)

This bridge is now one of the last medieval remnants in the town. Although included in the town's founding charter in 1144, the bridge was not completed until 1335 due to building complications. Some 205 metres in length, it was once protected by two towers and housed a chapel at its centre. .

2 / PLACE NATIONALE (17th century and early 18th century)

Rebuilt in the 17th century, the façades around Place Nationale belie its age. The public square, actually built in the town centre shortly after the town's foundation (1144), is one of the oldest in France. Its twin rows of covered walkways were practical for traders and pedestrians to move about in all weathers, perhaps one of the earliest indoor shopping centres! A thriving part of the town, the gentle buzz of the café and restaurant terraces spilling onto the tiles brings the square alive every morning.

3 / SAINT-JACQUES CHURCH (13th, 17th and 18th century) / 62. rue de la République

An iconic monument of Montauban, Saint-Jacques Church has witnessed the town's proudest moments and most dramatic episodes of its history. Its façade still displays the marks made by cannonballs shot during the town siege of 1621. The church, built in the southern Gothic style of the 13th century, was raised to the rank of cathedral from 1629 to 1739.

4 / NOTRE-DAME-DE-L'ASSOMPTION

CATHEDRAL (Late 17th- and early 18th century) / 13, place Franklin Roosevelt

Built after the French Wars of Religion on the highest point of the town, its classic lines and white stone contrast brilliantly with the brick houses all around. Proudly displaying the king's arms at the top of its frontage, it is a testament to the Catholic victory over the former Protestant town.

5 / ANCIEN COLLÈGE MAISON DE LA CULTURE (Late 17th century)

/ 25, allée de l'Empereur

This former school now houses the Tourist Office and the Architecture and Heritage Interpretation Centre. The building was originally constructed by the Jesuits and has been extended multiple times. It is arranged around two vast courtyards and a chapel (Saint-Joseph Church, as it is known today).

6 / HISTORIC WALKWAYS (17th to 21st century)

/ allées de l'Empereur et Mortarieu

From the belvedere overlooking the Jardin des Plantes to the Esplanade des Fontaines, Mortarieu and Empereur are two recently renovated walkways that extend over the ditches that once surrounded the fortified medieval town. Sights along the way include the music kiosque, a nod to the one that stood there in 1900, and the contemporary sculptures erected in tribute to the artist Antoine Bourdelle and his work.

7 / THÉÂTRE OLYMPE DE GOUGES (1849)

Tucked away in the town centre, this Italianate theatre was opened in 1849 on the site of a former jeu de paume (real tennis) court dating from 1762. Audiences come to see a diverse programme of excellent productions in this inviting space.

Prolong the pleasure The CIAP offers an exciting range of guided tours all through the year. Whether you are a walking enthusiast or sports fan, have an ear for music or a palate for food, the instinct of a detective or the eye of an architecture and history buff, there are so many ways to experience Montauban. There is something for everyone however much time you have on your hands: from a flying visit to a longer stay, tailored to a young audience or more advanced.

Place Nationale and its curious inscriptions While strolling along the walkways, don't forget to look up and check out the keystones, some of which are inscribed with dates, initials and even the odd patronymic. These are the names of owners who had their houses rebuilt following the two fires that destroyed the square in the 17th century. Inscriptions that provide a window into how the buildings have changed over 400 years ago! The Ingres Bourdelles Museum built on a bridge arch The history of the Pont Vieux bridge and the former episcopal palace that houses the lngres Bourdelle Museum are closely intertwined. In the 17th century, the palace was erected on part of the bridge's apron, subsequently extended to reclaim space. This is why in the lower floors of the museum you might be surprised to see a bridge arch and the lower room of the tower that guarded the entrance to the town.

The unusual funding of Saint-Jacques Church The church you see today in fact replaced the original church that records show was founded in 1147. The decision to rebuild the church came about in extraordinary circumstances: in 1241, the inquisitor Pierre Seilhan came to Montauban to pass judgement on the great Montauban families who had supported the Cathar and Vaudois heretics. The judge agreed to lessen their strict punishment in exchange for monies to fund the new church.

Jewels in Grand

For lovers of the Art Deco style, a trip to REYNIÈS is a must. Practically rebuilt from scratch after the 1930 floods, the village is home to 132 houses built in this iconic style so characteristic of the inter war period.

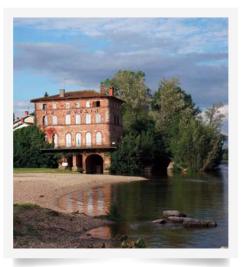

A visit to Reyniès is also a chance to visit a fine example of a 13th century castle. In the same family for 12 generations, this baked-brick fortification has three distinctive round towers. Dominating the right bank of the Tarn, it was added to the supplementary inventory of France's Historic Monuments in 1974. Exterior visits by appointment by calling + 33 (0)6 73 82 07 53.

ALBEFEUILLE-LAGARDE, located on the banks of the Tarn, was destroyed by the flood of 1930. An unexpected rescue came in the form of Adrien Mezger, Montauban's consul for the Netherlands and local resident, who succeeded in sourcing material and financial assistance from the Dutch. This is why the village today has several architectural features that resemble the town of Zuyderzee. Unusually, the rectangular tower attached to the town hall standing across from the church was used as a water tower in the 1950s. In 2017, the municipality received the "20th century heritage" label for its Dutch buildings

VILLEMADE, a floral village, has 13 of them, some square, others hexagonal and even "mule foot" style. It also houses a church erected in the 13th century dedicated to the martyred saints Fabian and Sebastian. Destroyed during the French Wars of Religion, it was rebuilt in the 15th century before being entirely resurrected a second time in 1864, with the exception of the bell tower that is listed as an Historic Monument.

LAMOTHE-CAPDEVILLE has a mill dating from the same period, which was renovated in the late 20th century. It overlooks Ardus beach, an ideal swimming or picnic spot on sunny days. In 1734, Baron of Lamothe commissioned a new château on the banks of the Aveyron, in Ardus, an elegant stately home whose façades, roofs and interior decoration in the music room are listed as Historic Monuments. He also founded an earthenware factory that earned the distinction of Royal Manufactory in 1739.

CULTURAL SITES

Museums, exhibition venues, art galleries, places of memory, theatres, concert halls – Montauban is a vibrant cultural hub with the Ingres Bourdelle Museum as its flagship attraction whose influence extends way beyond the local borders.

The Ingres Bourdelle Museum is housed in a stunning brick edifice that leads to a series of other buildings.

The story begins in the 12th century when the Counts of Toulouse put up a castle on the bank of the Tarn. It continues in 1360 when the Treaty of Brétigny gave the town away to the English. The son of King Edward III of England, known as the Black Prince, decided to build a fort on the ruins of the original castle. But the English were forced to flee from Montauban several years later and the unfinished fort gradually fell into ruin.

During the French Wars of Religion, the consuls of the Protestant town established a new fortified position to fire cannons. After the people of Montauban surrendered in 1629, the square was chosen by Bishop Pierre de Berthier as the site for his episcopal palace. Six senior clergymen would occupy the palace successively before it was confiscated in 1790 as a national asset.

During the French Revolution, the municipality used the palace as the town hall, a design school, the municipal library and a first museum in 1820. The museum's collection was regularly expanded, above all in 1843 by a donation from the former mayor Vialètes de Mortarieu, followed by a sizeable donation from Jean Auguste Dominique Ingres in 1851 and then the bequeath of the contents of his studio upon his death in 1867. In the early 20th century, the town hall and library were moved out allowing the Ingres Museum to take over the entire building. After nearly 200 years in existence, the museum underwent an important renovation and extension in 2017-2019 to secure its survival for centuries to come.

Did you-know?

From the Montauban Museum to the Ingres Bourdelle Museum The Ingres Museum owes its name to a decision made by Montauban's municipal council on 8 February 1867. On that day, following a proposal made by the elected representatives responding to Ingres' bequeath, the Montauban Museum changed its name to the Ingres Museum. Exactly 150 years later, the city undertook an extensive renovation programme, one upshot of which has been to give over an entire floor of the museum to another local figure: Antoine Bourdelle. To shine a brighter light on the sculptor's oeuvre, the municipal council resolved in 2019 to rename the museum to the Ingres Bourdelle Museum.

A museum like no Other

With its new and improved spaces and modular organisation to simplify the visit, the Ingres Bourdelle Museum is showing off its many treasures in a fresh light. Let's take a closer look at this museum that recently earned two stars from the Michelin Green Guides for its rich collections, excellent displays and visitor facilities. It proudly ranks among the finest museums in Occitanie and indeed the south of France.

The museum's around floor is given over to temporary exhibitions (see inset). Fans of Ingres will want to head to the first floor where his work is on display with large canvases demonstrating the influence of Antiquity and Raphael on his art, works from his early years and well-known portraits such as that of Madame Gonse.

This level also focuses on artworks from the Italian and Northern European Schools of the 14th, 15th and 16th century then the French and foreign schools of art of the 17th century. One section is dedicated to 18th century art from Boucher to David.

Sculpture enthusiasts are catered for in the lower basement, a floor entirely dedicated to Émile-Antoine Bourdelle. Every period of the artist is represented through marble, plaster, bronze, models and completed works.

The fortified lower levels dating from the 14th century with the famed Black Prince's room, are an opportunity to explore displays of archaeological objects related to the local history from Gallic-Roman times.

After Miguel Chevalier, the Black Prince room is being prepared for an art installation by Georges Rousse. Over a year. the features of this medieval building will be converted into a contemporary art space unfolding from the singular point of view of the artist.

The only Ingres museum in the world The museum in Montauban is the world's only museum devoted to the neoclassical master's work. Upon his death in 1867. Ingres bequeathed to the city his entire collection (with the exception of his famous violin) from his studio including 4,500 signed drawings that make up the heart of the museum's collection. These are joined by about thirty canvases and several dozen portfolios containing engravings and historical photos, tracings, pupils' copies and various studies.

A place for Sculpture Bourdelle step by step a special place in his heart for the town. Today, 10 bronze sculptures by this artist who Rodin himself described as "the pioneer of modernity" are waiting to be discovered on the streets and squares - wherever there is space! Look out for Sapho, Penelope, the Last Centaur... find the imposing Monument to the Dead...

In addition to works by the master himself, over thirty contemporary sculptures bring the town to life. Admire works by Jean-Louis Tripp, Flavio de Faveri, Jean Suzanne, Marc Dautry and other artists.

A promenade on the walkways

For the occasion of the regeneration of the Empereur and Mortarieu walkways, new contemporary artworks paying tribute to Bourdelle, man and artist, have found a place along this beautiful promenade. Departing from the Esplanade des Fontaines, admire Cleopatra by Faveri, or ascend to the Wave by Patrick Berthaud, in homage to Camille Claudel who worked alongside Bourdelle in Rodin's studio. Further along, just adjacent to the kiosque, keep an eye open for the monumental arrows by Émilie Prouchet Dalla Costa that seem to have been shot by Corinne Chauvet's Herakles the Archer emerging from the ground, installed a little further along on the belvedere overlooking the Jardin des Plantes.

The artist from Montpellier invaded the world with his extraterrestrial inspired mosaics depicting the titular aliens from the popular 80s arcade game. Did you know that Invader has also left a trace of his "invasion" of Montauban? This was in August 2009 for the occasion of the "Ingres and the modern painters" exhibition at the Ingres Museum. An homage to Ingres, inspired by his most impressive work The Source, can be found outside the museum, on Rue du Tescou. Ten more tiny figures are waiting to be spotted by the more observant among you... Miss Tic has also been inspired by famous works by Ingres for her creations, more subtle in nature. You can appreciate her work on the corner of Rue du Vieux Poids and Rue des Rondelles.

It was along Rue Porte du Moustier that the first large fresco produced by 100 Taur appeared in the midst of other works from local artists. Since then the multi-faceted and highly regarded visual artist has created two large frescoes inspired by two of Ingres' works: The Dream of Ossian and Roger Freeing Angelica. Nicolas Giraud, aka 100 Taur, whose trademark is depicting chimeras inspired by nature and mythology, has reinterpreted two classics by Montauban's favourite painter on Grand Rue Sapiac...

In the cyc of ... 100 Taur

"I wanted to display the ongoing dialogue between classical painters and contemporary painters through the exploration of common themes and inspirations."

MOG

At the corner of Rue de la Comédie and Rue Mary Lafon, opposite the theatre, MOG (an artist from Pau) armed with a spray can created a portrait of Montauban's most famous woman, Olympe de Gouges, a feminist pioneer in France and author of the Declaration of the Rights of Woman and of the Female Citizen. A colourful tribute! In the same spirit, the artist produced a fresco on Rue Fourchue in the spring of 2021. This alternative take on The Source is a further tribute to Ingres.

THE SKATEPARK

This site popular with skateboard, roller blade and scooter fans was prettified in 2020 by Clément Merlin and Marie Sforzini, then students at the Institut Supérieur Couleur Image Design. This 650 m² urban recreation facility now sports a fantastic fresco with a two-for-one design depending on your perspective. From the ground, large blocks of colour combined with graceful curves form a mass of abstract geometric shapes. If you look down from higher ground, the image of a nude woman holding a jar is revealed, echoing the subject of Ingres' iconic masterpiece.

Hall 82

For seven years now, the Mister Freeze association has been holding its Mister Freeze Festival. This highlight in the cultural calendar celebrates street art through a host of events in Toulouse and around. This year the festival is taking over parts of Montauban with new projects. You may already know about the Mister Freeze events in Hall 82, setting the tone for future artistic happenings including exhibitions, performances, open studios, urban art trails, and kids workshops... The association is all about supporting a rich and vibrant cultural scene hard hit by the pandemic, above all by continuing to transform various spaces into creative labs, bringing together artists from every horizon and generation and inviting spectators to come out and discover the results of unique collaborations that will be popping up soon. AUTUMN BY ANTOINE LABROCHE CHEF AT ANTOINE, AN OMNIVORE RESTAURANT

Caramelised salsify in brown butter and salsify crisps, salted hazelnut praline, Beaufort foam and fried garlic

Caramelised salsify in brown butter: 4 large salsify, 125g butter. Peel and wash the salsify, then add them to a pan of melted butter. Fry until the butter turns slightly brown. Then turn the heat down to caramelise the salsify until they soften.

Beaufort foam: 125g milk, 75g 35% fat single cream, 100g Beaufort cheese, quarter gelatin leaf. For the Beaufort foam: rehydrate the gelatin in cold water. Dice the cheese. Bring the milk and cream to a boil. Off the heat, add the Beaufort cheese and drained gelatin. Season then whisk. Blend the mixture and season to taste. Strain through a fine sieve. Leave to cool at room temperature followed by one hour in the fridge. Whisk the cheese mixture with a hand mixer and pour the mixture into a whipped cream dispenser. Activate the gas cartridges. Salted praine: 50g hazelnuts, 50g granulated sugar, 4 tsp cider vinegar, 1 pinch fleur de sel or sea salt flakes. Toast the hazelnuts for 5 minutes at 150°C. Heat the sugar with one tablespoon of water in a saucepan. As soon as a caramel forms, pour in the hazelnuts and cook the nuts on a low heat until they turn a lovely golden colour then tip onto a tray to cool. When cooled down, smash then blend the hazelnuts with the vinegar and salt until you obtain a liquid paste, adding water to loosen if needed.

Fried garlic: 6 large garlic cloves, 100g vegetable oil. Peel the cloves then finely chop with a mandoline slicer. Preheat the oil in a pan to 150°C then fry the garlic then pour on to kitchen towel to absorb the excess fat, then add salt.

Assembly: cut the salsify into equal pieces then heat them up. Place the liquid praline in the centre of the plate topped with the warm salsify then the Beaufort foam. Sprinkle over the fried garlic, roasted hazelnuts and a few salsify crisps, then serve.

WINTER By Hervé Daumy Chef at les terrasses de l'empereur

Confit shoulder of Quercy lamb with aromatics and sweet spices, creamed celeriac and Granny Smith apples

- 1 shoulder Quercy lamb (4-6 pers.), deboned
- 200g aromatics (garlic, onions, carrots, tomatoes, lemon, thyme, bay)
- 1 tsp gingerbread spices, 1 tbsp runny honey
- 1 glass dry white wine, 1 glass water, 1cl olive oil
- 1 celeriac, peeled and diced
- 200g Charlotte potatoes
- 2 Granny Smith apples, peeled and quartered
 1 litre milk, 100g lightly salted butter, 100g double cream

Season the lamb shoulder and put it in a roasting tin and place the aromatics all around. Baste the meat with olive oil, runny honey and the mixed spices.

Pour the white wine and water into the roasting tin. Roast at Gas Mark 5/190°C for 90 min. on each side (3 hours in total).

Leave the lamb covered in greaseproof paper or foil in the oven for a further 30 min.

While the lamb is roasting, cook the celeriac with the apples and potatoes in the milk for about 30 min. then strain. Blend the vegetables in a mixer then add the butter and double cream while still warm until you obtain a smooth, creamy purée, then set it aside.

Now gather round the table!

Carve the lamb then pour the cooking juices over the top (reduce if necessary for more concentrated flavours).

Serve with the celeriac purée.

The Pécou dragée, for every occasion

If Montauban were looking for its speciality, it found it in the dragée. Not just any sugared almond though: the Pécou dragée is in a league of its own.

Maison Pécou is one of Montauban's greatest success stories. The family business established in 1880 has earned an international reputation. And in Montauban, its confectionery is a veritable institution. After all, it's not just artistic savoir-faire that is handed down from generation to generation – culinary savoir-faire is too!

The Pécou family has been surrounded by the shimmer of the copper canisters holding the delicious dragées and the scent of vanilla sugar for over a century. It was Ernest who first entered the confectionery business. A passion that was passed down the family line.

While the original recipe has stayed the same for over a hundred years, carefully selected Avola almonds from Sicily coated in pure sugar, Pécou has also reinvented itself through the years and extended its range of sweet treats leaving its factory, now featuring 400 products. Chocolate and marshmallow are now also firm favourites and sweet-tooths will love the perfect marriage of unexpected flavours. A thoughtful blend of traditional know-how and innovation have allowed Maison Pécou to showcase French excellence and export it far and wide – from the United States to Japan.

Whether you're looking for a gift, something to share with friends or family or a treat for yourself, Pécou has a product for every occasion.

Find them all at Les Délices Guy Pécou, 10, Rue de la Résistance in Montauban.

The Montauban Boulet: sweet history!

Tasty and crunchy, these little black balls, known as Boulets de Montauban – or Montauban cannonballs – are a firm favourite among the local population. Not only for how they taste – but for what they represent too. "The boulet symbolises the spirit of resistance of the people of Montauban," Philippe Bécade, Deputy Mayor for Culture, happily explains. Why? Because this roasted hazelnut coated in chocolate was created by Maison Pécou to commemorate an episode of history that led to the legend of the 400 shots... When Louis XIII's troops placed the town under siege in 1621, the story says that they fired 400 cannonballs on Montauban to break through the defending army. In vain, however, since the people of Montauban stayed strong until the royal troops retreated.

The history of Montauban and more broadly of Grand Montauban is close linked to water. The town is traversed by the Tarn and Tescou and bordered by the Aveyron so unsurprisingly has developed around its rivers. Recommended by Marie Pierre, TRAVEL CONSULTANT AT THE TOURIST OFFICE

"There's nothing better than just seeing where the footpaths take you to put your busy life on hold. Grand Montauban has so many of them but there is one in particular that feels like you're in a completely different place. You need to make your way to Corbarieu, a few minutes from Montauban, which is surrounded by hills and plains. Fields, orchards, leafy slopes, babbling streams the landscape is so varied over there. In the woods, you'll be amazed by the variety of terrain you'll find with ascents, descents, footbridges, steps... this trail through nature is fascinating and entertaining in equal measure. Highly recommended! Just throw on your walking boots and get out into the countryside to fill your lungs with fresh air and quieten your mind."

A local curiosity

Escatalens is a destination known for one of the region's unique features: its dovecotes. No less than 16 of them in fact are waiting to be discovered along a 3-km trail through this pretty village, a testament to its strong agricultural heritage. Square, rectangular, some proudly crowned with a ridge turret... they come in a surprising variety of shapes and sizes but all ooze rustic charm. Saint-Julien fountain makes for a refreshing spot along your way.

Explore the region by bike ()

In addition to the 11-km Green Cycle Path that cycle tourists can take from Port Canal, Montauban is a very bike-friendly town. Over 60-km of paths are reserved for cyclists and pedestrians, especially along the banks of the Tarn and Tescou. One route also reaches Les Albarèdes and the sports field in Le Ramiérou via the Promenade des Montalbanais.

And if you opt for a bike to get you round the town during your stay, you'll be pleased to know there are 160 public bike racks in Montauban town centre. Plus almost 600 more outside the schools and sports and cultural venues around Grand Montauban.

Lake and river fishing

Fishing is a hugely popular sport among nature lovers. To attract the fish, several techniques are possible: lures and natural bait for the carnivores, angling and long-pole fishing for white fish, boilies for carp and attractors or imitations for trout. Traditionally a source of food, fishing has acquired a more modern image today and many fishers now return their catch to the water. So why fish at all? Simply to experience the thrill of feeling that tug on the line and reconnect with nature. Grand Montauban is blessed with a multitude of fishing spots to practise in your own company or with family.

FAMILY FISHING AMENITIES AT LA CLARE LAKE

This small lake is a stone's throw from Fonneuve, left just after the motorway bridge coming from the first Albias roundabout after Montauban. Aimed specifically at families looking to learn about fishing in a fun and safe environment, the site has large roach populations, safe banks and fishing stations. Other amenities include picnic tables, a barbecue and shelter. Just 15 minutes from Montauban, it's the ideal place to explore the joys of fishing with your kids

THE CANAL IN ESCATALENS

There is a long tradition of fishing in Escatalens and local association La Sofio has been representing fishers in the village and in the surrounding area for many years. Pike, carp, roach, trout, tench, barbel and more all live in the canal, which has a designated point with a picnic area and toilets, the Garonne river, the Maillol Lake, or Saint-Julien Lake that has a jetty adapted for people with reduced mobility.

BALAT-DAVID LAKE

This 12-hectare lake in a former quarry is a popular spot for fishers on the hunt for carp, shoals of perch and zander. Ecological restoration projects are planned to improve the natural fish resources by installing spawning grounds.

THE BANKS OF THE TARN AT BRESSOLS PLAYGROUND

The Tarn river has significant fish resources for almost any fishing technique. Bressols Playground is ideal for bringing your boat on a trailer, making yourself comfortable on the long fishing jetty and making the most of the on-site amenities including a children's play area, football pitch and walking trail.

CANAL DE MONTECH

This canal provides a welcome green space very close to Montauban's old town. Record sized black bass (up to 54 cm) can be fished in the catch and release section, between locks 8bis and 9bis. Night-time carp fishing is permitted at this same reach, but only on the left bank. Families might also want to discover the delights of fishing at Port Canal in Montauban. Absolute beginners might also be interested in learning the ropes with the Montauban fishing association (AAPPMA Montauban 3 Rivières).

MONTBETON LAKE

Montbeton Lake is a new amenity on the local map and will soon be open for fishing. The whole family will be entertained with outdoor fitness machines, play area for children aged 2-12, a 1.5-km walking trail, an interpretation trail to learn about the local flora and fauna, a petangue court and picnic area.

Fishing with the family in summer

The local federation organises family-friendly events all through summer for anyone wanting to catch their first fish in safe and simple surroundings. Your instructor will help you get to grips with the equipment, use a fishing rod properly and present the fish you catch at the end of the session. By the end of the course, you will know the fishing basics so you can go fishing on your own or with your children. Price: £8 (includes rod, lines, bait and fishing permit).

Opened in 1861, this superb botanical garden stretches over three hectares on both sides of the Tescou river. One of the finest landscape architects. Le Breton, was brought down from Paris to plan the Jardin des Plantes. It features a number of remarkable species including tulip trees and plum yews, most planted when the garden was first created.

In 1989, the municipality gave the Osage and Cherokee tribes a parcel of land in Montauban's botanical garden, an act rooted in the town's history. In 1827, American Indians from the Osage tribe arrived in France to plead the cause of their people. After being left to their own devices and wandering for months, three members of the tribe arrived in Montauban. Bishop Dubourg welcomed them and helped them return to America thanks to the generosity of the local community.

"Who knew Grand Montauban had its own garden of Eden! I was shown around by the owner, a former landscape gardener who's just as enthusiastic today, and discovered a thousand and one varieties from around the world. Shrubs, rose bushes, trees, perennials, aquatic plants and more all blend in together around natural sources and have a calming influence in surroundings inspired by Feng Shui. Each flower, each leaf has its own history, not to mention its fragrance and colour. I'd recommend this place to anyone who loves nature and enjoys taking the time to marvel at its wonders. A breath of fresh air."

AUGUST

Summer festivities

2021 is the 400th anniversary of one of the most important events in Montauban's history: the town's attempted siege by Louis

XIII's royal troops in 1621. Above and beyond its historical facts, the memory of this event is part and parcel of the town's identity. The famous legend of the 400 "coups" or shots is a big part of the town's collective imagination and the salvo of the royal cannons fired over Montauban is almost palpable in the air.

An historic event in September 2021

To mark this significant anniversary, the city will come to life to commemorate these "400 cannon shots" from 15 to 22 September 2021. A fun and festive programme of culture and entertainment. A major exhibition, walks, live performances, a sound and light show, animal displays, a big banquet, traditional sports demonstrations, 17th century crafts and games from yesteryear will transform Montauban for a week. The European Heritage Days will also fall in this historic commemoration with further exhibitions, guided tours and large gatherings to attend.
